

and the star, and adorn the Christmas tree.

- Send Christmas greetings to friends and family: Keep emails at bay, and pen down a word or two for your loved ones. There's nothing like receiving a personalised greeting card.
- Sing Christmas carols: It does not matter if you croak as long as you do it together. Bring in the holiday season with some festive cheer and a chorus of voices singing praises.
- Spend time with your belong to a joint family, make chits and pick names playing 'Secret Santa'. Try not to burst the bubble until Christmas night.

- Go for mass together: Celebrate Christmas the traditional way. Attend the midnight mass with your family in church.
- After mass, gather round the Christmas tree and unwrap your gifts: Everyone loves presents. So make a beeline for the tree and rummage through the pile to know what is in store

Christmas pudding, there is always something for everyone to do. Volunteer your services behind the kitchen counter to see that smile on your mom's face.

- Steal a kiss under the mistletoe: While you waltz to your favourite tune, make your way under the mistletoe and get romantic with your spouse.
- Don't forget the family picture: Capture these moments and make a Christmas album so you can remember the good times.

Invited to a baby shower?

Does it seem like the stork has been having a rather busy year? In case you're being invited to baby showers often, here are some gifting ideas.

- A portable bouncy seat will keep a baby as well as his parents happy — the baby can wiggle to his heart's content, and parents go about their chores knowing the baby is safe and having fun.
- A baby monitor can pick up a baby's faintest breaths within a range of 600 feet or more and is very helpful when you're in a separate room.
- A newborn can never have enough rompers. Gift a to-be-mum a set of four or six rompers.
- Colourful bedding, baby pillows, and soft fuzzy throws are very handy.
- Another great gift is a sling or front carrier. Babies love being cuddled and this simple design will leave your hands free.
- An activity gym comprises a cloth mat and toys suspended from soft bars or arches. Colourful mirrors, noisemakers, and soft toys of different shapes, sizes, and colours dangle within the baby's grasp, encouraging developing eyesight and growing physical skills.
